Giardia Lamblia Antigen Rapid Test

#Z1.
B12

Giardia lamblia is a microscopic parasite that causes Giardiasis with symptoms including diarrhea, gas, stomach pain, vomiting, and dehydration. People get sick by swallowing Giardia germs. But in some people, they do not give symptoms at all. Giardia lives in the intestines of human beings or animals and is spread through stool. It is stable outside the body and spreads easily. Anything it touches could be contaminated, especially in contaminated stools, water, food, surfaces. Traveling to areas with poor sanitation or contact with infected people or animals is also a risk.
